CONFESSES TO MURDER OF SIX-YEAR-OLD CHILD

Hotel Night Watchman's Confession Brings Stirring Chicago Police Case to Climax

Chicago, July 27.—Thomas Fitzgerald, night watchman of a residential hotel, today confessed to the police that he had murdered six-year-old Janet Wilkinson, a neighbor's child, and thus brought to a climax one of Chicago's most stirring police cases.

Fitzgerald, 39 years old, made his confession after five sleepless days and nights of questioning, and then the police to his home where he had concealed the body last Tuesday. The child had been strangled. A crowd surrounded the home and when the body was removed there were threats against the confessed offender. A guard was thrown about him and he was hurried to a cell. The crowd followed to the station, where it was dispersed. When the child, daughter of a grocer, disappeared, suspicion was directed against the boy.

ed toward Fitzgerald and he was ested. Two days ago Fitzgerald's e was called home from Michigan.
first she declared implicit faith in husband, but later said she be-ed he had knowledge of the d's disappearance.

As to whether or not Chester is to have a cotton grade this year is as yet a matter of speculation. The necessary funds have been raised but we understand the government's fund for this purpose has been exhausted. In the event some cotton which has applied for the government fund falls down on the proposition Chester may be able to secure its grade, otherwise there does not seem to be much of a chance for Chester this year.

A sufficient number of names to call an election in Chester to decide whether or not Chester will issue $140,000 in bonds for street improvements and $35,000 for water work improvements and extensions have been secured. The committee-men who have the lists are anxious to secure more than the majority and will probably keep the lists until the later part of the week when they will be turned over to the city officials who will then open the books of registration, as required by law. As soon as possible after the registration books are closed the election will be held. It is generally believed there will be very little opposition to the election and it is hoped that Chester will be able to get a considerable amount of the work done on her streets this year.

Houseboat Goes Down. The contractors engaged in ditching Turkey creek, lost one of their cabin boats last Friday. The cabin boat was being used for living quarters for some of the workmen and was tied up along behind the dredge. When a heavy shower raised the creek the cabin boat broke loose from its moorings and went down the creek until it struck the dredge boat. There it sank in ten feet of water. The workmen lost practically all they had, which was mostly stored away in trunks. The trunks came to the top and floated down the creek. There was $50 in cash in one trunk, and $30 in another. The trunks were recovered, but as they were not locked their contents had spilled out. —Yorkville Enquirer.

WILL NEVER BE RETRACED.

In republishing the long indictment of the liquor traffic by the United States Senate Committee for its effort to control the politics of the country and for its pro-German work through the brewery interests, the Springfield (Mass.) Republican says:

"But it is also clear that the only way to free the nation from such an incubus is to exterminate it. The first step to that end is to outlaw the entire trade, and that step has been taken. It will never be retraced."

The article goes on to say that the liquor trade will never be restored to America. Prior to the Civil War many ardent advocates of slavery brought forth vigorous arguments in behalf of the wisdom of slavery. We have a book written prior to the Civil War by a distinguished Methodist clergyman who undertook to prove by interpretation of the Bible that to abolish slavery would be to go directly contrary to the teaching of the Bible. Indeed, he held that slavery was of Divine origin and should be maintained by the South. His argument in behalf of slavery was far more plausible and had more justification than any argument that can possibly be advanced in behalf of the liquor traffic. Indeed, slavery took millions of people from the barbarism of Africa, civilized them and evangelized hundreds of thousands of them, resulting in probably the greatest piece of missionary work ever done in the last five or six centuries.

This slavery had something to do with the liquor traffic, has nothing to do with it. It cannot live except on the broken hearts and the ruined lives of its devotees. It has filled this world through the centuries with widows and orphans, with lives completely wrecked for this world and ours lost for eternity through its accursed effect on mankind. No one dares today to uphold slavery; no one dares to defend the opium traffic or the "personal liberty" shall permit cocaine and opium and other deadly drugs to be freely sold and used. But the arguments for slavery and for "personal liberty" in the handling and the use of deadly drugs are far stronger than any argument that can be advanced in the name of the liquor traffic. Opinion Grows That Treaty Will Be Modified President. Said, at a breakfasting of the Senate, August 12, 1919.

Washington, July 27.—No word came from the White House today to give up intimations that President Wilson before beginning his speaking tour, might make some public expression of his views on the treaty to the covenant of the League of Nations, which some Republican senators insist are necessary to its ratification.

Although no one in the president's official family would take notice of these intimations, which are "widespread," the impression continues to grow in congressional and official circles that the president has some such idea in his mind.

Tomorrow the president will receive callers at his desk in the executive office for the first time in several days. All his appointments are with Democratic members of the house or senate.

This morning the president's "accompaniment" by Mrs. Wilson, attending church in the afternoon he took an automobile ride into the country.

An announcement regarding the president's forthcoming trip to the Pacific coast is expected from the White House tomorrow or Tuesday. Mr. Wilson has said to have made consideration an itinerary calling for his departure from Washington August 5. If this date is finally decided upon he is due to arrive in Los Angeles August 12, after making a few speeches in the Middle West.

It is generally held, when expected that the trip would not start before August 10, at the earliest.

Now, however, Mr. Wilson is decided to be on his way to start his "swing around the circle" as soon as "being around the circle" will be desirable. His speeches will be designed to give a clear cut analysis of the conditions, he feels make the league of nations a necessity and the things he hopes its ratification will accomplish. The president also probably will take occasions to answer his critics.

Extraordinary arrangements are being made to accommodate a large number of newspaper correspondents on the trip, requests for permission to accompany the chief executive have poured into the White House from all sections of the country. From present indications at least two score correspondents may go along.
